

THE EU TRAMPLE THEIR OWN CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS IN THEIR ATTACK ON HUNGARY

After the proposal to strip Hungary of its veto rights, and amidst the ongoing article 7 offensive, the liberal rulers of the EU launched yet another offensive against Hungary.

13 (or 16) parties proposed for the European Commission to take action over the passing of Hungary's Anti-pedophilia legislation, which includes passages that forbid exposure of LGTB+ content to minors, and limits sexual education to registered educators. This is based on the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union^[1], where article 14, paragraph 3 says:

3. The freedom to found educational establishments with due respect for democratic principles and the right of parents to ensure the education and teaching of their children in conformity with their religious, philosophical and pedagogical convictions shall be respected, in accordance with the national laws governing the exercise of such freedom and right.

In essence the EU are violating their own law by insisting that pro-lgbt organizations and content be shown at children.

Now to understand the context of this law, it must first be said that these laws are often like a "rubber bone" thrown to a dog: A distraction from actual laws. The ninth constitutional amendment^[2] that defined mother as a woman and the father as a man (and effectively banned adoption by same-sex couples) was a cover for two important changes: One redefining public money (limiting transparency) in the constitution, and the change to the election law increasing the number of successful candidates necessary for a country-wide list from 27^[3] to 71^[4], severely limiting small parties in electoral participation. This last part was given full support by the otherwise bleeding heart liberalists who want as few participants in elections as possible, since they view small parties as designed to siphon votes from them.

This time it's the matter of Fudan University: In 2018 Hungary passed a law to support Fudan to build a campus in Budapest^[5], taking up part of the previously planned "Student city" complex (to solve student housing problems), taking a loan from china to build it. Predictably, our western partners and their comprador local liberals are against it, the main criticisms being that it is too much debt (The closest thing to valid criticism) and that the terms are unfavorable to Hungary. Of course the damage to the student city, and various western talking points (Hong kong, Xinjiang, Tibet) are brought up too.

Budapest is in the hands of the pro-west liberal opposition (Click pest megye, check the parties)^[6], which has been trying to use it as a strongpoint from which to launch anti-government offensive and resistance. It renamed the streets around the proposed blocks where the university will be built in a provocative fashion, and threatened with a referendum, with predictable results given the high concentration of the urban intelligentsia and studentry, the voting base of hungarian liberalists.

While the government, faced with this degree of organized local opposition, seemingly backed off and allowed a referendum in 2023, it pushed through alongside the anti-pedophilia law a law passing the valuable city blocks from the state to the ownership of the Fudan Hungary Foundation,^[7] limiting the maneuvering room of a potential opposition government.

Now, much more should, and will be said about the whole Fudan matter, but that is a topic to be dissected in another article.
